sz 1/2 "like" trying to convince someone to do a set things his way.

He has particular dislikes, but actually the people he's around in ~~the~~ mainly can only influence, not command person is a bit of a zealot, & he's promoting some kind of action that others see as rather perilous. He's a good salesman, though, & some fear he may persuade undecided ones to give him majority support. There is one overall key figure who carries most weight but whom those present regard as somewhat out of it - a bit of an autocrat, who might be inclined to make last-second decisions because of a whim, but which would bind the others to support it. The zealous person is honestly accepted by the overall person because the zealous person is a "young ho" "hard charger" whose goals & Weltanschauung are quite similar to the leader's, though the leader is marginally more than the zealous person can get carried away & be preposterous in his demands; still the leader is likely to listen to him because he likes what he says & because he often regards the others as worry-wart wafflers.

Perceived debate is about a course of action, involving violence, military low-scale commitment - both directed against ~~external~~ external nation, but also with a potential for physical & diplomatic harm to their own interests. The cooler heads acknowledge that it could work, but that the potential damage might outweigh any good that might come of it. Still, they're intrigued, if cautious. On a continuum, they're a little right of center, the zealot wags towards the left end. (He senses the need to be extreme to balance out the others).

Sense of somewhat paranoia. Internal structure and loyalty base is stable, but leaders have a feeling that everyone external is out to get them. Friends are made conditionally, always with the suspicion that they'll turn on them when it's all over. That most do not have centrifugal borders

Such units except in few cases, alliances are opportunistic & not expected to last
